

We oppose the proposal to expand LPFM services so as to give them priority over national or regional services.

We currently listen (almost exclusively) to the K-LOVE national service.

It provides the sort of wholesome 'family friendly' broadcasting that it almost impossible to find elsewhere, and does it without commercials (another source of bad influences on the airwaves).

Cable television programming is thoroughly corrupted.

Broadcast television is almost as bad.

Commercial radio, even with the laudable enforcement efforts of late, is still full of decadent and unhealthy material.

We are very nearly to the point of having to opt out of any sort of television or radio service.

We would ask that the FCC preserve the present regulatory system which allows services such as K-LOVE radio to operate in its current form.
